Stop-Price

An Indicator of When to Sell or Cover a Position

An adjusted 13-Week Moving Average of Closing Prices is used to compute Stop-Price.

Buy, Sell or Hold Criteria

Buy (1) Price > Stop Price, (2) VST > 1, (3) RT > 1 and (4) Price must be diverging away from
Stop Price

Sell Price < Stop Price

Hold Price > Stop, but any of the other three factors needed to receive a Buy are not met.

VectorVest

Timing the London Market for Consistent Profits

VectorVest

The secret to making consistent profits in shares is to:

Buy Rising Shares in Rising Markets,
Sell Falling Shares in Falling Markets

Timing the Market

VectorVest has been Timing the Market for over 20 years and has perfected several systems that identifies market trends with accuracy and precision.

We have long term systems for investors and short term systems for traders

Timing the Market

VectorVest

All systems are totally rule based and
NO subjective input is required.

- Price of the VectorVest Composite
- Breadth of the VectorVest Composite (Buy/Sell ratio)
- Momentum or (RT) of the VectorVest Composite.

Timing the Market

Short term trading systems (Primary Wave) based around short period ROC of Price, Momentum and Breadth.

Longer term systems (Underlying trend) based around a longer period ROC of Price, Momentum and Breadth.

Timing the Market

To minimise chart watching for those on the move the trends are coded simply

As I write the trend on the LSE is Up/UP

This means the Primary Wave is Up and the Underlying trend is UP.

This is reported on the front page of VectorVest each trading day.

Underlying trend is used by position traders.

Strategy 3/16/2017 EOD

STRATEGY: British stocks closed higher today as investors responded positively to the U.S. interest rate hike. With one green light and an UpUp situation:

Prudent Investors may buy stocks long if the market is rising.

Aggressive Investors and Traders should play the market as it develops with a bias to the upside.
